THE EUROPEAN INVESTMENT BANK is the European Union's bank and the world's biggest multilateral lender. Owned by the Member States, it strives to implement EU policy goals in and outside Europe.

But what does that mean in practice? Our job is to fund sustainable projects in four areas: climate, infrastructure, innovation and small and medium-sized businesses, the engine of job growth in Europe. By providing funding to those areas, we help attract additional investment – multiplying the impact on the ground.

The 2018 Statistical Report gives granular information on our lending and borrowing activities. For an overview, read the 2018 highlights to find out how much money we invested and where, and in which currencies we raised our funds. Next comes a geographical breakdown of signed financing contracts, which tells you how the funding pie was shared among EU countries and among regions outside of Europe.

The body of the report contains country profile pages for the 28 EU members, with graphs breaking down our cumulative lending to different economic sectors and charts showing how our financing activity compares to the previous five years. These pages also include comprehensive lists of projects signed in the country and the amount of money committed, along with indicators of the policy goals addressed.

Additional pages list projects signed in regions outside of Europe.

For a deeper understanding of trends in our lending, look at the supplement, which lays out investments by country and by policy objectives or economic sectors for 2018 and then over the 2014-2018 period. The supplement also provides detailed data on the money we raised through our own borrowing.

Finally, the end of the report summarises the European Investment Fund's 2018 activity and lists investments in three main categories: equity signatures, guarantees and inclusive finance.

Think of this report as a microscope you can use to examine the heart of our activities and the scope of our efforts to build a sustainable future for all.
