

Agenda of the European Economic Congress 2015

Inaugural session

20 April 2015
10.00-18.00

The difficult Europe

The effects of the crisis still impact the performance of economies and public finances of many European states. The spectre of stagnation is still there. Europe is burdened with unemployment and the lack of prospects for young people.

The formally united European Community has to contend with a scarcity of actual cohesion. Internal contradictions hamper joint action, undermine the competitiveness of the economy and block free market mechanisms. Political instability around Europe hampers development planning and impedes initiative.

The future of our Europe is a set of difficult questions. The European Economic Congress will attempt to answer them.
